HONOR NEW LENOX COUPLE ON ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Kinney, Hilton of New Lenox have journeyed life's pathway together for half a century and to commemorate this golden occasion, they invited a host of friends and made merry at a celebration of the event at the Grange hall, Saturday night.

A very bountiful supper was served to about 100 guests. The days of long ago were vividly recalled, when the once popular square dances, Virginia reels, etc., were enjoyed. Many of the guests who, while not young in years, were young in spirit, and thoroughly enjoyed the old dances.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moore furnished the music. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Petersen and Walter Gougar also furnished music for some of the more modern dances.

Everyone had a delightful time and departed for their homes in the wee small hours of the morning. The guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Hilton with $50 in gold as a memento of the occasion, and hope they will be spared to celebrate their 75th anniversary.

Mrs. Mary Sanders of Parkersburg, Ill., has been a guest at the Swinson home the past week.

Paul Maina who has been ill with blood poison, is somewhat improved.

The Woman's Guild of Grace Episcopal church will hold a bakery sale at the Archie Corp store Saturday.

Mr. Ferguson, local Rock Island depot agent, has been nursing a very sore hand the past week, caused by a scratch on a piece of hay baling wire. Infection set in and blood poison was feared.

The R. N. A. held a meeting in Grange hall on Tuesday night.

The Movie, "Going Up", shown in the M. E. church last Friday night was a scream, and made a decided hit.

Geo. C. Petersen has signed up as a member of the Independent Grocers Association. He has had the front of his store painted blue and white, the official colors of the Association. He is also having the interior of the store newly decorated.

Last Friday night as David Mangun was going by the Alfred Bethel place, he detected the odor of burning rubber and upon investigation found an auto on fire in the garage. The car belonged to O. J. Johnson and was quite badly damaged. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Work on the Boy Scout cabin in the Camp Grounds is progressing nicely.

The 7 and 8th grades of the New Lenox public school have set a record for 100 percent attendance.

Maple Street Does Not Favor S. W. Highway

Right of way will be donated for the South-West highway from Chicago to Joliet if it takes the direct route. This has been assured by the signatures of all but one property owner from Gougar Road to Alpine. Pressure is being exercised by the South Side towns and the Joliet Chamber of Commerce to get the Will County committee to accept the direct route. They had laid out this road through Marley adding two miles to its length.

A super highway forty feet wide when constructed and double that when finished is the plan of the committee seeking this route. The road would go direct north-east from Gougar Road and Maple street to the Cook County line at Alpine. It would be the shortest road to Chicago.

The Will County Bond Issue committee of the Board of Supervisors laid out the road along the Wabash to Maple street and over Maple street to Joliet. This would save two miles in Will County and add as much in Cook County. Later the Will County men were advised that Cook County did not favor this route.

A conference with state highway department officials will eventually determine the routing but it is believed that Joliet people will vote a bond issue more willingly that will give them some returns. Two miles less distance to Chicago would save thousands to Joliet motorists in a year. Besides it will put Joliet on the direct air line from Peoria to Chicago.

Maple street people do not favor the routing past their farms because widening the road to one hundred feet brings it almost to their doors and destroys all the name and its beauty.

Preparing For 60th Church Celebration

The past week, Rev. Glen T. Beatty, of the Mokena Methodist Church, sent out Pastoral letters to all of the members of that church, giving the first tentative plans for the 60th Anniversary of the Dedication of that building.

The paragraph of his letter dealing with the event follows:

"Our 60th Anniversary of Dedication Celebration, December 15 to 18. Keep the dates wide open, for you will not wish to miss any of the program. We expect to have such men as: Professor F. O. Beck, the great church sociologist who has helped plan and make the church community efficient for growing suburban centers all around Chicago; Professor F. G. Lankard, a most inspirational speaker on the Religious Education of our children, a specialist in Sunday School work; Dr. W. E. J. Graetz, who once before brought us a great lecture; and our own Dr. E. C. Lumsden, District Superintendent."

The pastor states that all of these men have not been absolutely definitely secured, but that negotiations are on with them and that the prospects are favorable. He promises that if any of these are not secured that men of the same big calibre will be had and that people will miss much if they do not plan to enjoy a season of the finest things that any church has offered at any time, in Mokena.

It is planned to invite all the surrounding communities to join with the Mokena community in celebrating the founding of this old land mark, to which many of the "old-timers" look back with much delightful memories of goneby days of great religious services. Many of these memories will be reviewed at the Anniversary.

Paving of 123rd St., Under Way

Construction of 123rd street two miles north of Orland Park is well under way. This road is to be completed from Keane Avenue west to Palos Park, that portion being already paved. That portion being already concreted.

Where is the Still?

Federal Revenue men were in Mokena Tuesday night and the report has it that a still and its operator was seized east of Mokena, but definite particulars are lacking.

Tell Me Now

If I have done aught with a sentiment fraught
That is worthy of praise or acclaim;
If I have brought cheer or have banished the fear
From a soul that was sick of the game;
If you think that I've earned, by some trick that I've turned,
A hand-shake, a smile, or a nod—
If you've something to say let me hear it today;
Don't wait till I'm under the sod.

If I've made a bad break or a glaring mistake;
If I've fallen down flat on a deal;
If I've sacrificed friends just to serve selfish ends,
Disregarding another man's weal;
If you think I'm a crook, well deserving the hook,
Or in need of advice from a friend,
Do not leave it unsaid until after I'm dead
And it's too late to alter or mend.

If you think a bouquet should be coming my way
Do not save it to lay on my bier;
If I've earned a reproof, don't, I pray, hold aloof
Till I've ended my journeying here.
Don't mislabel a spade; frankly laud or upbraid,
From indulgence and prejudice free,
And speak with a will both the good and the ill—
For I want all that's coming to me!

PLAN SOLDIERS MEMORIAL AT MOKENA CEM.

There is a movement on foot to erect a soldiers monument in the new addition to St. John's cemetery at Mokena. Acting on the suggestion of Assessor Joseph Kohl of Frankfort township, the Cemetery Association is offering a $150 lot in the new cemetery free to the community for the purpose of erecting a monument thereon in honor of all the soldiers of Frankfort township. The plan is to raise a fund by popular subscription, erect a shaft on which the name of every soldier buried in the cemetery of Frankfort township be engraved and room left so that any additional names may be added from time to time. This would include the soldiers of the civil war, Spanish-American war and the world war.

The lot on which the monument would stand would be kept in perpetual care without any cost to the community. The new project is a laudable one and we hope it will materialize. The first move to get the proposition under way took place on Friday, November 11th Armistice Day, when a flag pole was erected on the lot and the flag flown at half mast. It is hoped that enough sentiment in favor of the plan will be worked up during the winter months, so that the monument and lot can be dedicated next Memorial Day. This is not to be only a local affair, but is to take in the entire township and is similar to a like monument at the Plainfield cemetery.

Set Out 7000 Trees At Alpine

Alpine, the little town that God forgot, lying to the north of Mokena, may yet come into its own from present indications. The Frederick Bartlett Co., of Chicago, owns about 900 acres in and around Alpine. The past week a big force of men have been engaged to plant 7,000 poplar trees on these holdings. The trees are being planted in blocks.

It is understood that three concrete roads will run thru Alpine in the not far distance future. Wolf Road is already assured. Then 167 street is being considered another probability and the Southwest Highway is the third likely road.

If these highways are all completed within the next few years, Alpine will boom forth into a full fledged town, as the big Chicago Real Estate Company will no doubt quickly subdivide their holdings into a vast subdivision.

Rumor, the unconfirmed, has it that the Wabash railroad is considering moving their shops from Western Avenue to Alpine. If this should prove true, then the development of Alpine is assured.

White Store Buys 31st Store Stock

The popular White Store at Joliet is conducting another merchandising sale sensation now. Thru and by order of the Probate Court the White Store has purchased the stock of Riblon's Dry Goods Store, 207 Ruby Street, Joliet from the Matt Rublin Estate. The Riblon store stock, the thirty-first purchased by the White Store, is valued at $8,000.00. Be sure and read over some of the big bargains offered as per the quarter page adv. of the White Store appearing in this issue.

ROUTE 51 TO GO WEST OF FRANKFORT

The location of Route 51 thru Frankfort has been a bone of contention for months and it is now understood that the route is to go half a mile west of Frankfort. Coming from the south, the route will follow the Elsner road, cross the Michigan Central by means of a subway and run northeast coming out out at the Folkers slaughter house and thence to the four corners north of Frankfort.

This was the last survey made and it is understood is waiting the final approval of the highway department. By going this way instead of thru the heart of the village of Frankfort as at first proposed, a saving of about $30,000 will be effected which would be enough to build an additional mile of concrete.

It is reported that the first routing thru the village of Frankfort will be abandoned. The street thru the village is not wide enough for a concrete road and to buy property for the right of way would involve a very heavy expense so that the re-location of the route outside of the village will answer the purpose better. Locating the route thru the village was also a dangerous matter as children would be required to cross it going to and from school, the latter only being located a half a block away.

Swede Monson, end, sustained a broken wrist, of which an X-ray showed two broken bones. Both men will be lost for the rest of the season. A cold, wintry wind swept the field, chilling spectators as well as players.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Celebrates 104th Birthday

"I be merry," was the quick response of Mrs. Sophia Bird of Loughborough, Ireland, when congratulated on her recent birthday, which was her one hundred fourth. "I am very comfortable, and shall do my best to hold up for another birthday," she added smiling. All day long there was a procession of well-wishers who were met with a cheerful word and smile. Mrs. Bird arises at 9:30 o'clock every morning and retires at 9.

Wind

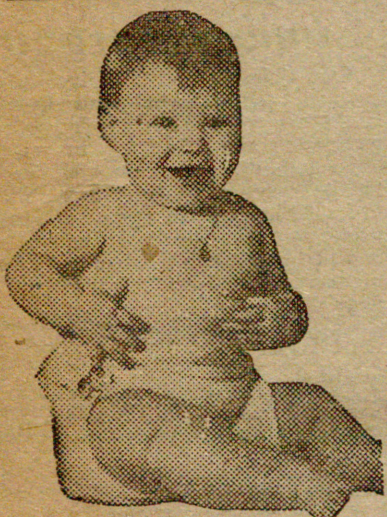

John Halkett, president of the building trades council, was discussing in New York the three-cornered wrangle between Italy, Yugo-Slavia and Albania.

"They talk a lot," he ended, "but nothing will happen. Talk, talk, talk."

And then Mr. Halkett smiled and said:

"Windy people never come to blows."

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of to-day escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

HATS AND WRAPS OF METAL CLOTH; FAVOR SNUG FELTS AND SOLEILS

AT THE gathering of the social clan at opera and other midwinter formal functions, the pomp and glory of clothes display will proclaim to the world that so far as dress is concerned this is indeed an era of elegance.

The outstanding feature of this season's evening modes is the emphasis placed on luxurious simplicity. If one may so express it. To illustrate—the headpiece and evening wraps in this picture are innocent of garish orna-

Not all metal wraps are shawls, however, for many are made in loose graceful dolman fashion. The coat at the top in the illustration is handsomely made with flowing sleeves and rich fur trimming. Young girls are having this gold and silver "lame" made up in coats of slim silhouette, quite like the street cloth models.

Snip, snip, snip! goes the scissors in the fashioning of the cunning felts which are "all the rage" for street and sportswear. It is a fact a ness, yet because of the gold and silver fabrics of which they are fashioned, they are almost breath-taking in their magnificence and beauty. The same that is true in regard to evening modes pertains to fashions throughout—the important part that fabrics play in achieving versatility and elegance in the style of the season.

Wraps made of metal cloth are the "last word" this season. They are usually accompanied by a little fitted skullcap or toque of glittering gold or silver cloth or lace.

Many of the wraps are nothing more or less than huge squares of gold or silver brocade or of plain weave metal cloth. To be sure they felt hat nowadays is not eligible to the modish class until it has undergone a major scissor operation from which it emerges a new "creation" flaunting fascinating eccentricities both of crown and of brim.

All this individualizing of the hat to its wearer has led to an interesting innovation in some of the shops, where expert modistes are employed to cut and pin the hat on the head. The way you do it is this—you choose the felt hood you like best. After which you are ushered to a seat before a large mirror, where a milliner is in waiting with scissors in hand. Just for all the world like going to the barber for a "bob"! Only instead of bobbing your hair the milliner bobs your hat, cutting away a superfluous part here, giving it a deft crease there and so on, until presto! you step forth smartly and becomingly hatted in a model individualized to your type. Not a bad idea! eh? Especially for the woman of large head size who welcomes an opportunity to be fitted with a hat that is up-to-the-minute in youthful styling.

Concerning the chic little felts grouped in this picture, they are charming examples of what a pair of scissors in the hand of the "milliner born" can achieve in the way of smart headwear. The cunning soft ripple-brim effect shown to the left at the top, also the smart toque in this collection are two superior solid types—are finished with hemstitching and fagoting of seams which lend to their attractiveness. Sometimes there is a center square of gold brocade bordered a quarter of a yard deep with a weave of silver.

There's a clever knack in wearing these metal cloth shawls which must be acquired to give them the proper cachet. Of course, if one prefers they can be enwrapped snugly about the shoulders as pictured to the left. However, the newest thing is to bring one edge up about the throat, letting it fall over like a large collar, enfolding the remainder of the shawl about the body somewhat after the manner that the Indians wear their blankets.

aristocrats in the realm of felt. Theirs is a sleek, silky finish and they are as light in weight as a feather.

The first hat in the group shows a coronet flange attained by cutting away the brim and raising it to bridge the top of the crown. The hat in the "center has been 'scissored,' too, the cut-away brim forming a tiara flange topped with a perky bow of the felt. The model to the left below stresses an off-the-face flange and a felt bow trimming at the back. The last hat features the new slashed and folded back brim, which is an exceedingly popular fashion.

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Hosea 11:1-4, 8, 9;
14:4-8

GOLDEN TEXT—I desire mercy and not sacrifice and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Unchanging Love of God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Loving-Kindness of God.

Hosea's message was primarily to Israel. The nation was outwardly prosperous, for its height of temporal glory was reached in the time of Jeroboam II. (See II Kings 14-20). With this prosperity came luxury, immorality and apostasy. Calf worship and Baal worship were substituted for the worship of God.

1. The Apostasy of Israel (chs. 1-3). Israel's covenant relationship with Jehovah is presented under the figure of a marriage. Their spiritual whoredom is symbolized by the example of an unfaithful wife.

1. The marriage (1:1, 2).

Hosea was commanded by God to take an unchaste woman to be his wife. While this was a strange act, yet it was right, for it was commanded by God, and its motive was the elevation of the woman to the prophet's moral plane. It was designed to show God's wonderful condescension and love in entering into covenant relationship with a nation of such immorality. The nation had no more to commend it when God chose it than this unchaste woman when Hosea contracted marriage with her.

2. The unfaithful wife (ch. 2).

Notwithstanding the wonderful condescension on the part of the prophet in contracting marriage with this woman, Gomer, the unfaithful wife, departs from him to consort with her former base lovers. This shows Israel's base ingratitude in their departure from God to go after idols. Sore chastisement fell upon her for her unfaithfulness.

3. Illustration of Gomer, the unfaithful wife (ch. 3).

This illustrates God's undying love for Israel. The motive governing the prophet's act was love. God's love for Israel is just as real. His grace will yet move Him to take back that nation to Himself.

11. God's Love for Israel (Hosea 11:1-4, 8, 9).

1. Its beginning (v. 1).

It began when Israel as a nation was in its childhood. God loved the nation even while in Egypt.

2. "Called my son out of Egypt" (v. 1).

God called Israel out of the bondage of Egypt and brought them into Canaan, the land of freedom—flowing with milk and honey. Such love and favor placed Israel under peculiar obligation to God.

3. "Taught Ephraim to go" (v. 3).

In spite of Israel's backsliding (v. 2), God is represented as teaching Israel how to walk, even as a father taking up his child in his arms. God watched over them as parents watch over their children by night.

4. "I drew with cords of a man (v. 4).

Observe that His drawing was not with a stout rope as used with an unruly heifer (ch. 10:11), but a cord such as a man could bear. God's wonderful love in Christ should constrain us to obey and serve Him.

5. Took off the yoke from the jaws and placed food before them (v. 4).

The figure is of a husbandman lifting the yoke from the oxen so that they could eat.

6. Unwillingness to give them up (vv. 8, 9).

In spite of all Israel's sin, God was unwilling to destroy them.

III. God Pleads for Repentance (14:4-8).

Notwithstanding their awful sins, God urged Israel to turn unto Him. He is doing the same to backsliders today. He made promise unto them.

1. "I will heal their backslidings" (v. 4).

This on the condition of frank and full confession.

2. "I will love them freely (v. 4).

This is characteristic of God. Only God can express unmerited love.

3. "I will be as the dew to Israel" (v. 5).

God will refresh the nation as dew does the parched grass.

4. Growth promised (v. 5).

5. Beauty assured (v. 6).

6. Pleasant fragrance (v. 7).

While this is a picture of the restored nation, something similar may be seen in the fragrant, fruitful lives of men and women who have sinned and come back to God.

Asbestos vs. Steak

The fire and heat shedding properties of asbestos are now so thoroughly proved that it is hard to realize that there was a time when, in the old idiom of Missouri, one had to be shown. A curious test—it entailed as well the winning of a prize—is said to have taken place in France a century ago, when a Frenchman named Chabert, clad in an asbestos-lined robe, entered an oven along with a steak.

"In twelve minutes," runs a recent account of the odd occurrence, "the steak and Mr. Chabert emerged—the former cooked, if a trifle overdone, the latter uncooked, if a trifle hot and bothered."

Thrives on Hard Work

"Hard work never killed anybody," says Mrs. Charles Gould, eighty-three, of Hillsborough, N. H., and points to herself and the seven cords of rock maple and birch wood that she split and piled in the shed last summer to prove her statement. Furthermore, Mrs. Gould expects to reach the century mark by dint of hard work alone and challenges any woman of her age to duplicate the splitting and piling of seven cords of wood.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Illinois Press Association.

A busy but smiling stork presided over 87,619 birth ceremonies while the Grim Reaper had charge of affairs over only 55,259 instances for the first eight months of this year in Illinois, according to a statement issued by Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director. These figures give a death rate of 11.3 per cent and a birth rate of 17.8 per cent per one thousand population. However, both the birth and death rates were lower than they had been for a number of years. The increase of births over deaths increased the density of population by almost one per square mile of land area.

The state department of public works and division of highways recently took under consideration bids for the construction of several stretches of hard roads, bridges and grading sections in various parts of the state. A large number of contractors submitted bids.

Route 72, section 12S, DeKalb-Kane counties, 5.59 miles, Trompeter and Sons, Peru, $10,788.70.

Route 116, section 11S, Livingston county, 15 miles, combination bid, Indiana Road Paving company, Rochester, Ind., $287,917.

In order to alleviate crowded conditions in Illinois penal institutions, the state parole board is being forced to adopt a more lenient attitude toward convicts, especially those serving terms for minor offenses. Lawrence Benson and Harry Jensen, members of the board sitting at Joliet, have heard applications for paroles of 150 prisoners in the old prison. They declared recently that it is the intention of the board to parole some of the inmates convicted of minor offenses and to have served the minimum term for the offenses. The record shows that there are 3,062 prisoners in the two institutions at Joliet. The state parole board, which consists of ten members, has Hinton G. Clabaugh, Chicago, as its head.

A bronze tablet, containing Lincoln's Gettysburg address, at the south door of the Sangamon county court house, was formally dedicated recently by the Women's Relief corps assisted by the Capitol City post.

A new publication, "Forest Trees of Illinois," issued by the state department of forest conservation, has become so popular that the book has gone into its second printing. The pamphlet was prepared by State Forester R. B. Miller and W. R. Mattoon. Requests for the booklet have been received from extension and state foresters of ten states, complimenting the state on issuance of such a bulletin and stating they desired to publish a similar book in their states. Most requests for the booklet are coming from state teachers to be used in botany courses. The University of Illinois is using them for both class and laboratory work.

The state commerce commission has received a joint application from the Illinois Southern Telephone company and the Perry County Telephone company for an order authorizing the sale of the Perry company's properties in Pinckneyville, Cutler and vicinity to the Illinois Southern company. The latter concern also asked for a certificate of convenience and necessity to operate the properties.

L. H. Becherer, state purchasing agent, has announced the awarding of contracts for coal to be used in state institutions for the year ending June 30, 1928. The Panther Creek Coal company will furnish 46,000 tons of mine run and nut coal at a total cost of $91,900. Pana and Penwell Coal companies, Pana, were awarded the contract for 10,000 tons of screenings for a total cost of $13,500. The Brewerton Coal company, Lincoln, was low bidder on the contract for 14,325 tons of screenings for use in institutions in and near Lincoln. The contract calls for $34,953 to be paid to the company. The Capital Coal and Coke company of St. Louis was given a contract for 5,500 tons of screenings for a total contract price of $7,810.

The state division of highways let the contract recently for the grading of a stretch of forty-foot pavement in Kane and Cook counties to the Burch Construction company, Madison, Wis., for $101,994.72.

Route 142-A, section 101A, Wayne county, grading; King and Sheehan, Dudley, Ill., $50,699.56. The contract for a bridge on the same route was awarded to Zimmerman Bridge company, Paris, for $17,615.

Route 25, section 7V, Clay county, bridge, to J. P. Lynch, Robinson, $23,736.06.

Confidence that the Chicago city council would soon be in position to appeal to Gov. Len Small to call a special session of the legislature to untangle Chicago's chaotic traction system was expressed in a statement recently to the press by James W. Breen, first assistant corporation counsel. The bills proposed for submission to a special session of the legislature would provide:

For construction of a subway.

For consolidation of railroad corporations and street railways to operate as one line.

For creation of a transit commission covering all of Cook county.

For terminable permits, or franchises, granting power to the city to contract with the corporations which operate street cars, fix causes for termination of contracts, and permit the city to purchase at any time.

For amendment of the city charter to permit application of the first four proposed measures.

Illinois 2-cent gasoline law, which is bringing a monthly revenue of approximately $1,000,000, to the state, will be under legal fire at the December term of the state Supreme court. The issues have been made up by the attorneys for the Chicago Motor club, which is testing the validity of the law. The attorneys for the club contend that the act is unconstitutional because it places the burden on gasoline-propelled cars, while vehicles propelled by kerosene and electricity escape the tax. They declare also that the act is invalid because no provision is made for the taxing of gasoline (some millions of gallons) stored in the state prior to the time the act became effective.

Gov. Len Small issued his annual Armistice day proclamation recently. The proclamation read in part as follows:

"November 11 marks the passing of the ninth year since the signing of the armistice was flashed around the world. And to the end that the great event, so largely due to the patriotism and valor of our people, shall not be lightly regarded and eventually forgotten, the congress of the United States as well as the general assembly of Illinois have enacted legislation providing that the anniversary of the armistice be observed as a holiday to afford opportunity for our citizens fitly to celebrate the victory of the allied armies in the World war."

A large number of congressmen, members of the legislature, residents of the various cities in the Illinois river valley, together with members of the drainage boards, accompanied Governor Small to Washington the first part of the month to urge federal relief for flood conditions in the Mississippi and Illinois river valleys. The party from the capitol city was joined in Chicago by a delegation headed by Mayor William Hale Thompson. The Illinois delegation appeared before the congressional committee of which Congressman Frank Reid, Aurora, is chairman.

David E. Shanahan, member of the Illinois legislature since 1894 and four times speaker of the house of representatives, is recovering from an attack of high blood pressure which he suffered recently. Mr. Shanahan, who is sixty-five years old, suffered a slight hemorrhage recently and was taken to Mercy hospital in Chicago for treatment.

NEW LAWS OF ILLINOIS
[This is a continuation of the list of bills that were passed by the Fifty-fifth general assembly and have received the signature of Governor Small, or have been allowed to become laws without his signature.]

Authorized district to dedicate any of its real property for highway purposes, excepting certain property described therein. Present provisions limiting the right of the district to convey certain described properties are replaced. Permits sanitary districts to incur indebtedness to the extent of 5 per cent of the value of the taxable property therein instead of 4 per cent and extends the time during which such district may incur bonded indebtedness from December 31, 1927, to December 31, 1928. Provides that present tax limit in such district shall not include the tax levied for bonded indebtedness.

House bill 563 (Overland). Amends section 2 of an act concerning the levy and extension of taxes, May 9, 1901, known as the Juul law. Provides that the tax rate to be levied under "an act to create sanitary districts and to remove obstructions in the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers, May 29, 1889," shall not be reduced below 30 cents per hundred dollars (exclusive of levies to pay bonded indebtedness). Previous maximum rate was 18 cents.

Minnesota Saw Flies Kill Tamarack Trees

Flies are killing off the tamarack trees near Grand Rapids, Minn., by starving them to death.

So declares Henry Goldberg, forest ranger, who has just returned from a tour through Itasca county forests. Goldberg states that he found the woods full of winged insects called saw flies which feed upon the needles of leaves by means of which the tree manufactures its food from the air and soil. By successive assaults the flies literally starve the trees to death.

The forest ranger stated the return of the leaf eaters may indicate a repetition of the plague between 1909 and 1916 in Minnesota, when the insects killed 65 per cent of the merchantable tamarack in the state valued at $2,500,000.

Potato Appetite

The average person in the United States eats approximately two and two-thirds bushels of potatoes annually after allowing for approximately one bushel per capita of culls, spoilage and shrinkage. The average German eats about seven bushels, and the United States Department of Agriculture reports that this is only 28 per cent of the annual crop in Germany, where the potato is used to feed live stock and for the manufacture of starch and alcohol.

Costly to Railroads

In 1926 the railroads of the country paid more than $8,000,000 in settlement of claims for damage to fresh fruit and vegetables in transit. This amounted to an average of nearly $8 a car, while damage claims on all other commodities averaged about 50 cents a car.

Slaughter of Whales Has Brought Protest

Wholesale slaughter of whales by Norwegian fleets in the Ross sea is being protested by naturalists and scientists of Australia and New Zealand, who say that continuation of the practice will mean the extinction of whales.

A proposal to call an international convention to regulate the killing is being considered.

It is reported that two Norwegian ships operating from Stewart Island in the Ross sea in the latter part of 1926 and the early months of 1927 captured 700 whales, yielding $2,500,000 worth of oil, and that another ship, with Hobart as its base, took about 50,000 barrels of whale oil to Norway.

It is estimated that 1,500 whales were killed in the last year. The territory is under the jurisdiction of New Zealand, which receives a royalty on the oil.

The Way It Goes

"It's queer how the affairs of the average man pursued," stated old Riley Rezzidew of Petunia. "A fellow will go spraddling along for years without any premeditation, getting the itch and religion and being run over by Fords and drug around by the same, and getting shot for an innocent bystander, and fighting with his kin, and just sorter fiddlin' along that a-way, and then all of a sudden wake up and find himself dead or famous. nobody knows why."

At a dinner in London Sir Arthur Conan Doyle told of a conversation he had with a young actor in one of his plays who was getting $10 a week. The latter laughingly suggested that he and the author should divide their incomes with each other the rest of their lives. Sir Arthur refused and he said that he has since regretted it—the young actor was Charlie Chaplin.

WORTH

HALLOWEEN DINNER GREAT SUCCESS

The Halloween dinner given in honor of Mr. L. Macauley at the Worth Community Church was a great success. There was a good crowd of people present. The Ladies of the church and community served a very fine dinner. Followed the dinner Rev. Sanders acted as toast master introducing Rev. DeLong who is assisting at Worth. He gave a short talk on the work of the Church and the community and the appreciation of the fine spirit of Mr. Macauley. Mr. Macauley was called to speak. He portrayed a very fine spirit in his talk giving his reason for presenting the church with a well. He said he felt it his duty to do all he could for the church because of what the church had done for him. He counted it his duty as a church member and public citizen to do his part.

Rev. Coats of Lemont delivered the address of the evening. He won the crowd completely in his humor and then serious discussion. He holds a very warm place in the hearts of the Worth people.

The people were given an opportunity to share in Mr. Macauley's gift to the church. A basket was placed at the door and all who wanted to might contribute to the cost of the well in order that Mr. Macauley would not have to bear the whole expense. The fine spirit of Worth was expressed in that the people gave of their own free will $80.00 toward the well. It was a very successful evening.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP CLUB MEETING

The Good Fellowship Club of Worth celebrated their first open meeting with a speaker from Chicago. He presented the problem of a public water system for the community taking up the various factors involved. ATHLETIC CLUB PROGRESSING

The Worth Community Church Athletic Club under the leadership of Rev. DeLong is progressing very well. There are now about 25 members, boys 15 to 25 years of age. Mr. Dan Crandall has promised the boys a punching bag because of their good behavior Halloween night. This is certainly the right spirit because not many village police would be so public spirited.

The young men are fixing up a gymnasium in Mr. Ferrin's old garage. They are gradually collecting equipment. It will be a fine opportunity for other public spirited citizens to help the young men by aiding them with their equipment.

Trade among Friends

No matter what some folks say to the contrary, there certainly is a lot of sentiment in business. Friendship, for instance, makes more satisfactory sales than all the cleverness and argument in the world.

You like to trade at a certain store—not because its counters are arranged in a scientific way, but because the folks who serve you are always friendly and helpful.

Just that very thing—FRIENDLY SERVICE—is the power that draws people together into communities like this, where everybody can enjoy the many benefits of neighborly cooperation.

And FRIENDLY SERVICE is the sentimental reason why you find it very much to your advantage to trade with our advertisers—to buy where you feel at home, where your friends will see that you are well satisfied.

A Statement For The Press

By
GAIL S. CARTER
GRAND DRAGON OF THE REALM OF ILLINOIS THE
KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN.

Anent the publicity which appeared in the Chicago Daily Press last week regarding Mayor Hale Thompson and the Ku Klux Klan with reference to their mutual opinion relative to the present controversy within the Free Public School System of Chicago as it applies to Pro-British propaganda, I have the following to say:

The situation existing in the Chicago public schools and Library which has been disclosed by the discovery of Pro-British propaganda in the textbooks taught in the public schools is presenting to all American people the value and necessity of a careful and alert effort being made at all times to protect the American youth, upon which the destiny of this Nation will eventually depend, from being propagandized by hyphenated Americanism. If America is to be kept American, a condition must be maintained at all times to keep constantly before the American youth the heroic and patriotic service and sacrifice made by the Americans of the yesterdays thru facts, and not propaganda.

There is, however, a condition existing today that has not yet been disclosed regarding propaganda in the public school textbooks, particularly histories, in that they contain more pro-religious-denominational propaganda than they do Pro-British.

In fact, the investigation made by the Ku Klux Klan to date reveals that there is as much pro-alien and pro-religious-denominational propaganda in the textbooks being used by the public schools of Illinois today as there are fundamental American facts. In the past few years these histories and textbooks have become literally filled with alleged information regarding the activities of certain religious Klux Klan and Mayor Thompson leadership in the distinctive garb and start activity in every community in Illinois for an aggressive were and are affiliated with. Realizing that the present program relating to the Pro-British program is taking up all of the time and attention of Mayor Thompson and his assistants, The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has secured the services of certain educators and historians for the purpose of compiling a record of the pro-religious-propaganda within the histories and textbooks being used by the public schools of Chicago. We feel that Mayor Thompson's "America First" program will eventually rid the public schools of Chicago of every influence and bit of propaganda that does not smack of one hundred per cent Americanism, religious and otherwise.

The Ku Klux Klan sees no necessity for discussing in the school room, the leadership, power, prowess, or standing of the various religious organizations of the world. It affords an opportunity for those teachers who are influenced by powerful religious organizations and those who have had training along that particular line to propagandize the students in favor of seeing things religiously as the teacher sees them. Let the American youth secure his religious ideals and appreciation at his mother's knee or at the family altar or in whatever church he chooses to affiliate with, but keep all propaganda that is designed to create respect and influence, through service, act, or deed, for any particular religious denomination, out of our public schools.

KEEP CHURCH AND STATE FOREVER SEPARATE.

The Ku Klux Klan is endeavoring to rid the public schools of America of all influences that teach or cause to be taught any fact or idea that is in conflict with the spirit and ideals reflected in the Declaration of Independence or that is contradictory to the Constitution of the United States, and when the truth and actual existing conditions are disclosed by these many public expressions and public hearings, all people who love America and desire to keep it genuinely American certainly will join with The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and Mayor Thompson leadership in the distinctive garb and start activity in every community in Illinois for an aggressive ive "America First" campaign. If the public press in Illinois will give the same publicity to the leadership and influences that are the influences investigating the Pro-religious-propaganda prevailing in the public schools that they are now giving to the influences investigating Pro-British propaganda, a far more dangerous situation to America will be disclosed and greater enemies to America will be disclosed than has been or will be shown as the outgrowth of any Pro-British effort.

The Klan started the 100 per cent American thought in America and has spent millions of dollars in propagating an "America First" program. That is why we are in harmony with any public official with the courage to carry the fight to the enemies of 100 per cent Americanism.

So much has been said in the Ill. Newspapers about the Alabama Klan situation that I feel that the Grand Dragon of the Realm of Ill. should make a statement relative to it based on a somewhat intimate knowledge of the Alabama Klan, and a thorough understanding of the official policy of The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan regarding whipping, flogging, and other unlawful activities of members and non-members of the Klan.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has always stood for law and order. It has never condoned mob violence or lawlessness in any form. The Klan assumes full responsibility for all of its official acts, but like any other large corporation, or organization it is oftentimes confronted with problems growing out of unofficial and unauthorized acts by members and non-members of its organization.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of Alabama could not have and did not sanction any such activity as has been charged to it by Attorney General McCall of Alabama. He knows that to be a fact. If Klansmen have violated the law of the land and the Klan, they should and will be banished from the Klan. The Klan proved that position by banishing D. C. Stephenson of Indiana eighteen months before the law of the land interested themselves in his depredations. When the smoke is cleared away, it will not be difficult for anyone to see and to understand that local Alabama and National Politics has had a lot to do with the sudden desire of certain public officials of that state to charge the Klan with alleged law violation. The marvelous political expression of the Klan in Alabama has elicited many politicians in and out of that state.

The Klan of Illinois has never been charged with unlawful activity of any kind, and I want to go on written record now that we will not countenance any whipping, flogging, or intimidation of anyone by Klans or Klansmen. We will, on the other hand, willingly assist in the prosecution of any member or non-member who is charged with such activity under the name of Klan. My six year record in the Klan, if examined by friend or foe, will convince anyone of the sincerity of this promise of mine to the citizens of Illinois.

I favor the enactment of a law making it a felony, punishable by substantial fine and imprisonment for a term of years for any person to assume a disguise and thereafter inflict, offer or threaten violence or corporal injury to any human being irrespective of race, creed, or color. As spokesman for the Klan in Illinois, I shall ask for the enactment of such a law by the legislature at its next session. The Klan will lend its full support to the passage of such a bill, and if such a law is adopted, the Klan will render every possible assistance in prosecuting violators of that law.

"A good lead dog has an extra sense—instinct for a trail. Castor has it; that's why he's our lead dog. He has brains, too."

"Where's Shot?"

"Oh, he's following the shore. If he misses us, he'll circle and get our scent."

"Won't he bark?"

"No, he was taught not to—at night. But I must make a decision."

"A decision?"

"We're near the mouth of the Kapiskau. It's going to be slow work—can you stand this till daylight?"

"What has that to do with the Kapiskau?"

"If you're tired—too tired to go on, we can stop at the post." She caught a note almost of appeal in his voice.

"Too tired," she protested, "an army nurse tired when there's a patient to take care of?"

"I know, but it's a bit dangerous, too," he said doubtfully. "Of course I'd like to keep on—for his sake."

"Well, we'll keep on. It means making Elkwan hours sooner, doesn't it? And that counts. I can sleep on this sled. I'm almost asleep now."

"Thank you, Soldier!" he said, and stopped the team while he consulted his compass. "If I could only see that shore—the boulders."

Guthrie left the sled, and fastening a long rawhide thong to Castor's collar, cried, "Haw, Castor! We're going ashore to see if we can stumble into those boulders."

But leading his team and at intervals stopping to examine the ice from his knees, to Guthrie's surprise the dogs traveled many hundred yards without reaching the drift and the shell ice of the shore. Was he deep in the mouth of the Kapiskau? And off shore?

He had been too careful to have drifted off toward Akimisk, yet he had traveled a mile straight into the shore without hitting it. The only possible solution was the wide mouth of the Kapiskau—and he had wished to avoid getting into the river—had hoped to pass well outside. Swinging the team into the northwest, he decided to travel by compass for another mile. That would bring him into the north shore, if he were inside the river mouth. It would also—He looked toward the invisible figure on the sled—the girl who had unreservedly placed herself in his hands—who had entered on this voyage of mercy, thoughtless of self. The hands inside his mittens shut convulsively, as a warning Etienne had once given him flashed across his memory. And he had brought her—the thing most precious in the world to Garth Guthrie—into this. Why had he not camped on the Big Willow?

For minutes Guthrie walked ahead of his team, praying for signs in the ice—a gray blur at his feet—of the proximity of the shore. Then—desperate, he stood on the tail of the sled and urged his dogs into a trot, as he checked them from circling with the luminous dial he held in his mittens. For a space Castor gingerly led the team into the black wall when through the murk sounded a brittle bark.

Aroused, the yelping huskies quickened their pace.

"Shot's found the shore—he smells something," cried Guthrie to the girl in front of him. "Queer, he barked, though!"

Again the rough voice of the alre-dale broke through the pit-like blackness. Castor answered. With a jerk the huskies started into a fast trot. They had not traveled a hundred yards when, directly in front of the invisible team, sounded Shot's raw challenge. There was an impact of hard bodies, Castor's snarl of rage, Polux's roar, followed by the bedlam of huskies fighting. Into the melee of enraged dogs tangled in their traces slid the sled. With the handle of his heavy dog-gond clubbed, the bewildered Guthrie ran to the rescue of the alre-dale, who for some inexplicable reason had attacked Castor. Mercilessly swinging the heavy butt of the whip, calling the dogs by name, he blindly fought to free the offending Shot from the knife-like fangs of Castor and Polux. A heaving mass of snapping jaws, the huskies, mad with excitement, tripped, hampered by their traces, were slashing wildly in the dark at their enemy and each other.

At last, taking a slash which ripped the sleeve of his parka as he reached in, Garth got Shot's collar with one hand and lifting the struggling dog while he clubbed the others back, dragged him from the milling team.

Attempting to follow, Castor fell "united by a blow on the skull, and Guthrie was free from the infuriated team, unable, enmeshed in their traces, to drag the sled in pursuit of the alre-dale who fought in Guthrie's arms to return to the battle.

"Oh, what has happened?" called Joan Quarrier's frightened voice. "It was too awful. What started them?"

"It's all right. I've got Shot and he's not cut much. He'll cool off in a minute. For some reason he piled in to Castor."

"Attacked Castor?"

Guthrie led his dog to the tail of the sled where he made him fast. "Yes, he must have bowled Castor over on the run. Of course that started the team. But it's so dark I doubt if any of them are hurt much. They couldn't see to strike—and their traces saved Shot. He's got two on the shoulder but they're not deep."

The girl was off the sled and soothing the alre-dale trembling with the heat of the fight.

"I'll straighten out the dogs now. They don't care for this whip-handle."

"I could hear the blows," she said. "It hurt, but I suppose it was the only way."

"They'd have killed Shot, if they once got him down. I had to get him out of it quickly," Guthrie explained, and calming his excited dogs, soon had them on their feet with straightened traces. Castor, Garth's favorite, who had taken the bulk of the blows, found the hand of his master with his tongue as he rubbed against Guthrie's leg. Garth rumbled the erect ears of the trembling Ungava.

"Poor old boy! It wasn't your fault, was it, if Shot went crazy? Don't blame you a bit, old man. I had to do it, but it's forgotten, isn't it? Yes, good old Castor!" With a pat of the massive skull, Garth went to soothe the still excited Polux, and the rest.

But all the while his brain was busy with the strange action of the alre-dale. They were close to the beach. Shot had found—killed—something, and refused to share it with the approaching team. But why did he leave it?

With Shot lashed to the tail of the sled, and the heat of the combat cooled in the blood of the huskies through the soothing tones of the master's voice and the touch of his hand, Guthrie again called to his lead dog.

"Marche, Castor!"

As the sled started, the alre-dale broke into furious barking. Puzzled, Guthrie turned back. "What's the matter, Shot?"

The dog was clearly excited about something. With a whimper he rose on his hind legs and pawed the man's chest in dumb attempt to communicate the reason for his protest.

"What is it, old boy? What's over on that shore you don't want us to see?"

"Tell me, Shot," called the girl, and the dog left Guthrie to go to her but was stopped by his leash.

"It's more than queer," said Guthrie. "It's uncanny. Well, I've got to find that shore to make a fresh start. Now, Shot, be quiet, will you?"

Again the driver called, "Marche, Castor!"

The dogs leaned into their collars and the sled started, but from its tail rose the howls of the protesting Shot.

"Good Lord, I've got to look into this! I'll be back shortly." And, stopping his team, Garth walked in to the murk.

He had advanced but a short distance, doubled over the ice, feeling his way with his moccasins, when he stopped, as a chill like the touch of a cold wind, cut through him.

"Tide crack!" he gasped. Within a step of the gray blur of ice on which he stood, a black streak, fading into the enveloping gloom, barred his way. "We're in the river mouth . . . among the tide cracks—Etienne warned me! Shot—old Shot, God bless him—he knew!"

Shot's actions were clear enough now. Coming upon the open water toward which the sled was hurrying, the alre-dale had returned on the bound, barking a warning as he came. Then, as the dogs came on at a trot, Shot had catapulted into Castor, starting a fight and—stopping the sled. Stunned, struck with remorse, Guthrie crouched on the lip of the gash in the river ice, into which dogs, sled—all of them, would have blindly plunged but for Shot's mad attack on the team.

To have led her to this—a hideous death with the dogs drawn under by the drag of the sled. And Etienne had warned him of the tide cracks in the river mouths. He had intended making a wide swing around the Kapiskau, but in his search for the beach, had entered the river. But Shot, staunch old warrior that he was, had through some uncanny instinct sensed their danger and taken the only method of stopping the team.

Putting her trust in Garth Guthrie, Shot had saved her. He turned back to the team, thrilled with pride in the dog who worried at his leash. The love of the man for his dog had been cemented by yet one more bond. Shot had saved her for Garth Guthrie!

"What did you find?" she asked as he reached the sled.

"I learned that we'll have to back-track straight east," he said calmly.

"Why, aren't we heading for the shore?"

"Yes, but we've got to get out of this river. When I strike the sea-ice, I'm going to circle, hit the coast, and give you some rest."

"But we ought to keep on."

"Not in this blackness. It's as thick as Flemish rain in March. I've got to lead the team," he did not add, "to watch for water ahead."

Unleashing Shot, whom he hugged as he mumbled for a space into a hairy ear, Guthrie sent the alre-dale out as an advance patrol. He had found water once, he would find it again if they stumbled upon another tide crack. Leading Castor on a leash, he started straight east for the sea-ice.

For an hour they walked, Shot ranging ahead while Guthrie, bent forward, eyes on the ice and his compass dial, cautiously followed. Fearful of not yet having cleared the river mouth, he led his dogs for another hour, then circled into the northwest and found the shore above Kapiskau. There he fed his dogs, cut willow and alder, and with his cedar kindling got a fire going to boil the kettles. As soon as it lightened enough to follow the coast, they would start afresh for Elkwan. After the Kapiskau, the ten-mile delta of the Attawapiskat was not to be thought of.

As Joan Quarrier sat by the comforting heat in the willow thicket, Guthrie told her the story which he had kept from her while he groped through the water traps of the river mouth.

She sat with parted lips, her serious eyes suspiciously bright, as Garth explained why Shot had hurled himself on the team.

"And you never told me what you found when you left us?"

"Why scare you? It was bad enough as it was."

She shook her head in protest. "You call me a soldier, and treat me as a woman."

"You are a woman to me—too precious to take out on a night like this and drive into a tide crack," he replied, watching the light of the fire play on her brooding eyes.

For answer she called: "Come here, Shot—to me. I want to kiss you."

The alre-dale rose, stretched, yawned, and wagged his way to her.

"But I Almost Lost You."

"There," I'll never forget what you did tonight. You deserve the V. C."

With a grunt, Shot thrust his nose toward her hood.

"Look out, he's trying to return the kiss," warned the man who envied his dog.

Her white teeth flashed in amusement. "You may, Shotty, on the cheek, for you're a brave and gallant gentleman."

"And the other brave and gallant gentlemen—are they to be ignored? Aren't Castor and Polux, and—their brave and gallant master, to share in your salute, oh, mon general?"

"This general decorates but one hero tonight and that is Shot," she replied archly. "His devotion has been proved."

"And mine?"

She would not meet his eyes. "Oh, my friend," she parried, "we have work before us—a bitter fight for the life of a brave man. Why think of ourselves?"

In the lee of the sled, tipped on its side, its canvas cover stretched above her like a shed tent to reflect the heat of the fire, Joan Quarrier slept, warm in her robes, until waked by the crackling of the fire at dawn.

"Good morning, Healer of Wounds. The tea is almost ready; the bacon done; the bread cut. Will you wash your face and hands in the snow, and partake of the bounties set before you on these beautiful plates of tin?"

Through sleepy eyes the girl smiled up at the man who had labored for her comfort. "You are very good to your passenger, Mr. Exile. I shall recommend this line to all who contemplate a night voyage up this coast."

"We ought to make Elkwan by noon. I wonder what we'll find," he said, pouring the hot tea.

"Whatever we find, Maj. Garth Guthrie, you have squared your debt. No man could have done more for his friend."

"But I almost lost you—"

"That would have been the fortune of war."

"And the irony of fate, with Etienne and poor Galbraith waiting up there at Elkwan for two who never came."

CHAPTER XIII

At noon, that day, a lone figure stood in the snow on the clearing at Elkwan and searched the river-ice below the post. With a dubious shake of the head, Etienne returned to Old Anne and his wife, waiting in Guthrie's quarters.

"Ver' black night; hard to follow de shore. Something happen to M'sieu Guthrie. Mebbe de woman not come wild heem."

"She come," insisted Old Anne. "She come w'en he ask. She come."

"Dat McDona', he ver' seek man."

She breeng de med-ceene eef she come. I go an' have a look at de trail."

Again Etienne stood on the cliff above the white Elkwan and watched for the moving spot on the ice, which would mark the approaching team. Disappointed, he was about to return to the women in the house when his keen eyes suddenly lit with excitement. Far on the white shell of the river seemed to move a black spot. For a space the half-breed studied the barely distinguishable object. Then he trotted to the quarters.

"Dey come!" he cried to the waiting women. "Dey turn de beeg islan!"

When the huskies that had traveled forty miles since daylight drew in to the cliff trail at a slow walk, Guthrie hurried to the waiting Etienne with the demand: "You got him here? He's alive?"

The half-breed nodded, then with a wide grin turned to the girl on the sled. "Allo! You welcome to Elkwan, ma'm'selle!" as he assisted her out of the robes.

"I'm mighty glad to see you, Etienne. How are Marie and the chicks, and dear Old Anne?"

"Oh, ver' fine, tanks. You have hard ride las' night?"

Joan and Garth exchanged smiles. "We surely did," replied Guthrie. "We camped at the Kapiskau."

"At de Kapiskau?"

Guthrie's thoughts were of the man at his quarters and he did not explain. With Joan and Savanne he hurried across the clearing.

"Well?" he questioned, as the army nurse finished taking the pulse and temperature of the man whose rough breathing filled the room.

Without answering she placed her ear to the broad chest of the man muttering in delirium. After a space she turned to the waiting Guthrie with puzzled eyes.

"I don't quite understand. Pulse almost normal, temperature only 101, respiration not high, and yet he's developed pneumonia in one lung. I can easily hear the rales!"

"You mean he has beaten the flu?"

"I think so; he's so strong. But pneumonia—"

"It hits the big men hardest," he said gloomily.

Joan gave the patient a hypodermic of strychnia and left the room to make some gruel.

"Craig Galbraith—Laughing McDonald!" mused Guthrie aloud. "You gave all you had for Canada, and now Canada hunts you because a woman without eyes could see only your scars."

On her return with the nourishment, Joan found Guthrie still gazing with somber eyes at his friend.

With her well-equipped medicine kit, and her wide experience with influenza and pneumonia cases in the army, Joan Quarrier gave immediate battle for the life dependent on her care. But the problem confronting Guthrie was more complex. What was to become of Galbraith if he lived? Cameron would waste no time in taking possession of the schooner and its valuable cargo, which he would hold for the disposition of the authorities at Ottawa. But the schooner and cargo belonged to the estates of the dead men. McDonald was officially dead. He, a hunted man, could not claim it. Who, beside his wife, were his heirs? Garth did not know.

Then Cameron had said the police were coming shortly to the bay in search of the man who called himself McDonald. Failing to find McDonald's body, which Garth said he had seen on the boat, they would naturally come to Elkwan to talk to the man who brought the news to Albany. If Craig lived, he would be weeks in bed, recovering his strength. Where could they hide a man needing constant care if a police dog-team appeared on the ice below the post? Etienne could be hustled into bed and bandaged to corroborate the story told to Cameron, but Galbraith—what of him? Accessory though it made him to the crime of his friend, the gray eyes of Guthrie hardened at the thought of Galbraith, V. C. Galbraith the trench-raider, whose name was known the length of the British front, being bounded down in his dire extremity. Garth laughed as he pictured the police attempting to take Laughing McDonald on his schooner in the fullness of his strength—McDonald Ha! Ha! and the bearded man who limped, with Lewis guns and the snipers' rifles they had slept with for four years.

And Joan—he had made her an accessory as well; asked her to nurse a man she knew, now, was wanted for murder. How was he to square his conscience with that? To pay his debt to Galbraith he not only had asked her to throw her reputation to the winds, but to defy the law—Joan Quarrier, who had stepped into his life to become his world.

Nahant's Town Seal

The town seal of Nahant, Mass., is supposed to depict a white man pursuing the peninsula from an Indian saganore for a suit of clothes or a pair of breeches.

This transaction occurred in 1620 and the white man shown on the seal is Thomas Dexter.

Dexter's title to Nahant was denied from the start by the town of Lynn and, after a contest lasting 80 years, Lynn prevailed. The town seal, however, is based on this transaction.

Great Emotional Role Long Without Friends

The role that is now considered by most actresses to be the world's greatest emotional part—Camille—once went begging for some one to play it, points out a noted actress in an article in Liberty. "When it was first written the part was refused by every actress in Paris," the writer explains. "Then, after it had gone begging for months, it was picked up and played by Madame Eugénie Duche, who needed a part very badly because she had been ill and off the stage for a long time. So Madame Duche goes down in history as the first to play Camille. "Since then," the writer continues, "it is probably true that Camille has been played by more and greater actresses than any other role in the world. It was the part that won Sarah Bernhardt her first universal praise. Eleanora Duse played the part to cheers and tears, although quite differently. And there were so many others—Helena Modjeska, Clara Morris, Rejane, Fanny Davenport, Nance O'Neill, Olga Nethersole, Margaret Anglin, Ethel Barrymore. No wonder that Camille has been called the world's greatest emotional role."

"Secular" Music

The Latin word from which this term is taken simply means "age," as when we speak of something going on "from age to age." In this way it applies only to the world and to worldly things. Thus in one church a secular priest signifies one performing his functions while still living in the world, as opposed to the monastic priest, who is cut off from it.

Secular music, then, is the ordinary music of the ordinary world, its opposite being sacred or church music.
